

Directors Responsibility in Compliance

The Directors are held responsible for all ongoing compliance requirements. Directors must ensure that the company's activities do not deviate from the MOA. Noncompliance will attract heavy fine or even prosecution at the Court of Law. Any changes in registered particulars should be promptly reported to the Registrar of Companies. Directors must ensure that the company acts in trustworthy manner without any willful negligence of its obligations, and disclose true information about its financial status and business activities.

Every company is struggling with increasing number of regulations. Silo compliance drives and overlapping compliance requirements is leading to duplication of efforts. The manual methods of tracking the compliances are not reliable and scalable for every changing compliance requirements. Senior management and Board are carrying high risk of compliance violation because of lack of visibility into their compliances.

Total Compliance provides unified solution for all your compliance needs across organization. It allows organization to define and track compliances and provides provides visibility and transparency into compliance readiness.
